Davie and Joy Napier

The Napier Initiative is a mentoring program for students from the Claremont Colleges with a passion for social justice. Launched in 2010, the Initiative honors two former Pilgrim Place residents, Davie and Joy Napier, who were tireless advocates for economic and social justice and inspired a generation of students to join their efforts.

The Awards Banquet will celebrate 16 new Napier Fellows proposing projects for social change; two projects will receive grants for implementation.

Key-note speaker and Napier Medalist in 2015 is Ambassador James Joseph, who has served as an ordained minister, an advisor to four American presidents, chaplain at the Claremont Colleges, a professor, author, and a determined advocate of civil rights.

From 1995 – 1999, he served as US Ambassador to South Africa. His continuing involvement with the “Emerging Leaders Program” in partnership with both the University of Cape Town and Duke University underscores his passion and commitment to the mentoring and development of the next generation of significant leaders who are already working to make a positive impact in our world.
